DETAILED ACTION

Currently, Claims 1-20 are pending. Claims 15-20 are examined on the merits.

Election/Restrictions

Applicant's election without traverse of Group II (Claim 15-20), species cappaprenol 12 and palmitic acid, in the reply filed on April 9, 2008 is acknowledged.

Claims 1-14 are withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a nonelected group, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Election was made without traverse in the reply filed on April 9, 2008.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.

4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 15-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Pauly et al. (US 2003/0091518 A1) and Al-Said et al. (1988, Pharmazie, 43, pages 640-641).

Pauly et al. teaches cosmetic composition that has anti-inflammatory property (paragraph 0005) with capers (paragraph 0011), in oil composition with fatty acid (paragraph 0016), weight of oil is 1 to 99.9% (paragraph 0019), palmitic acid (paragraph 0059), as shampoos, lotions, cream, gels lotions (paragraph 0088). However, it does not teach the concentration of fat, cappaprenol-12, glucosinate-free.

Al-Said et al. teaches homologous polyprenols cappaprenol-12, cappaprenol-13, and cappaprenol-14 with 12, 13 and 14 isoprene units, respectively, were isolated by preparative HPLC from alcoholic extracts of Capparis spinosa (Abstract), which has anti-inflammatory activity on carrageenan-induced paw edema in rats (Investigations, results, and discussion). No glucosinate was in the isolate because the extracts are purified.

The references do not specifically teach combining cappaprenol-12 and palmitic acid together. The references do teach that these ingredients are used in treating inflammation (see discussion above). As discussed in MPEP 2144.06:

It is prima facie obvious to combine two compositions each of which is taught by the prior art to be useful for the same purpose, in order to form a third composition to be used for the very same purpose.... [T]he idea of combining them flows logically from their having been individually taught in the prior art.

Thus, it would be obvious to combine cappaprenol-12 with palmitic acid because they are taught in the reference to have the same purpose.

The references also do not specifically teach adding the ingredients in the amounts claimed by applicant. The amount of a specific ingredient in a composition is clearly a result effective parameter that a person of ordinary skill in the art would routinely optimize. "[W]here the general conditions of a claim are disclosed in the prior art, it is not inventive to discover the optimum or workable ranges by routine experimentation." In re Aller, 220 F.2d 454, 456, 105 USPQ 233, 235 (CCPA 1955). Thus, optimization of general conditions is a routine practice that would be obvious for a person of ordinary skill in the art to employ. It would have been customary for an artisan of ordinary skill to determine the optimal amount of each ingredient to add in order to best achieve the desired results. Thus, absent some demonstration of unexpected results from the claimed parameters, this optimization of ingredient amount would have been obvious at the time of applicant's invention.

Conclusion

No claim is allowed.
